Tax Stalemate or a State Homestead Act

By George B. Bowers
Member of California Legislature
78th Assembly District

Any social problem reaching a stalemate may create a dangerous condition, halting all progress. Tax delinquencies have resulted in the transfer of many thousands of parcels of land to the state, so many in fact that routine sales have been suspended for the scarcity of bidders and the uncertainties of the value of the deed offered by the state. These uncertainties cause tax-title sharks to hesitate to acquire large areas, otherwise a more serious social problem would result.

Since a stalemate has been created, some person or party must assume the responsibility of proposing a solution, thereby dissipating the offing.

San Diego, in keeping with the other counties of the state, has over a period of years, accumulated a tremendous volume of tax delinquent properties, much of which has reverted to the state for non-payment of taxes, assessments and bonds. This is of serious interest to every county taxpayer because of these non-taxpaying properties adds to the burden of the man who is carrying the load; if the process continues, it can be only a matter of time until the burden becomes too heavy for even the most willing. It is inevitable, in most cases, that the delinquent property will remain delinquent, a dead weight in the march of progress, because the accumulated taxes, assessments and bonds with interest amount to more than the actual, even the assessed, value of the property.

Dead weight has no place in our forward march. These delinquent properties must be re-vitalized, returned to the rolls of the county tax collector. The culmination of such a program means the restoration of approximately 20,000 to 25,000 parcels of property to the tax rolls of the county. This would bring about a corresponding reduction in each individual tax bill if the plan were to be accomplished.

Such a program cannot, however, be consummated by any single county; it is a matter for all the counties and for our state legislators to accomplish. Old statutes, appraisals, must be annulled—old methods, forms and rules, often archaic, must be junked. Balance sheets must be totally revised—dead assets wiped out. In their stead may be placed assets which are vital and paying. This can be done most satisfactorily, many believe, through a state homestead act.

Should there be aroused sufficient public interest, the California Legislature would undoubtedly act by following the example of our national government in developing the greatest commonwealth of the world by making available this land now deeded to the state for tax delinquency, to acquisition by home-makers and prospective taxpayers. Any such plan would limit the area and

Ocean Beach Beauty Shop Sold To Texas People

Mrs. Gene Hoffman on Monday sold her Ocean Beach Beauty Shop at 5035 Newport avenue to Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Porter until lately of San Antonio, Texas, at which place they have conducted a similar business for a dozen years or more. Both the newcomers are experienced operators, Mr. Porter doing permanent waving and finger waving as well as other work in the beauty parlor.

Miss Priscilla Perry will continue as operator with the Porters, taking care of her old customers in the usual satisfactory manner.

Otis Afferbaugh and son Max of El Centro came over Saturday night to spend the week-end with Mrs. Afferbaugh, who is staying at 5022½ Niagara avenue for the summer. Their son William and wife and baby also came down from Southgate to visit them, returning Monday evening.

accord priority as in the case of the Federal Government.

Any such plan would not necessarily mean a total cancellation of taxes against the land now due the state. We already have on the statute books, authority to pay tax delinquencies by installments. Laws could be devised to permit the homesteader to pay such back taxes as the value of the land would warrant, the amount to be determined by the value of the parcel.

The final deed could be given after the grantor has improved the property to a certain amount, and has lived on it continuously for a stated number of years. A two thousand dollar improvement and ten years residence has been suggested. Thousands of home-makers immediately on receiving their grant would begin building homes for themselves and their families—many would be perhaps quite modest, representing only a small outlay of money, but the aggregate would be large. The resultant activity in building and the publicity throughout the nation would no doubt bring thousands of desirable citizens to California and assist in the consummation of the prediction made by Captain Dollar several years before his death, "the west coast will eventually house a hundred million people."

The final and most satisfactory result of some such plan as this outlined, would be the satisfaction of the general public in this consummation—patriotism is expressed most truly in the home-owner, the west coast is our most exposed flank, where active patriotism is most highly desirable—hence the advisability of such a plan.

However, before this homestead plan is offered to the legislature, or for public discussion, there should first be a complete survey of this serious social problem, state-owned lands through tax delinquencies to determine if this is the best plan, and uncover its legal obstacles, and their removal. A cursory examination points to the necessity of a constitutional amendment. But first, the survey, the foregoing is only a suggestion, a starting, the field is open for exploration.

XXXI
CARLSON AND THE LOCAL RAILROAD

Sidelights on conditions in Ocean Beach in the early nineties are afforded by the following excerpts from the files of the San Diego Union. The first is dated March 30, 1890 and is headed "The San Diego Railroad."

"If Mr. Carlson remains in Salt Lake until he established the 'perfect legitimacy of his enterprise,' it will be a long time until his smile reappears in San Diego. It is difficult to see how he can legitimize his act of trespass in laying his alleged railroad track on private property. There is probably not even a foot of his railroad track upon which even a six-ton locomotive could be run with safety."

This is the road which came along the bay shore to what is now known as "The Junction" on Rosecrans street, though it has been many years since street cars had here a meeting place; and it passed westward through what is to this day known as Carlson Canyon on its way toward Ocean Beach. Just where it terminated I do not know. Just when it was laid, I think no one knows exactly. It was never a railroad in fact, of course—having merely the appearance of a bona fide railroad. That is, there were ties scattered along the bay shore, and upon them were laid rails of a sort. They constituted a symbol of a prosperity that was not so soon to come as Carlson continued in the face of ridicule and calumny to prophesy.

The Union of April 5, 1890 has this comment:

"WHERE WAS BILLY'S SMILE?
The Carlson Railroad Torn Up across the Old Town Flats.

The Pacific Coast Steamship Company Levy on Carlson's Road in a Peculiar Way—The Rails Delivered at the Steamship Wharf During the Night.

There was a sound of revelry by night, but on investigation it was found to be a sound of railing, and the reporter, who followed the sound, fell up against a policeman at the foot of 5th street, and was told to go over on 4th street and he would see what he would see.

At the foot of 4th street he found that five carloads of railroad iron had been loaded onto the cars belonging to the Pacific coast S.S.Co., and seven more loads were lying on the ground waiting to be loaded. It was very evident that the rails were to be shipped out of the city on the steamer which leaves today.

While the reporter lingered listening another four-horse team came down 4th street, the jingling rails making merry music in the air. It was quickly unloaded and started back. From a word or two which was dropped, the reporter hastened to the foot of H street, expecting to find the Carlson road torn from its moorings and carted away. But he didn't. From there to D street he found the track in good condition; that is, a man with long reach of step could go from tie to tie, and the rails were all there."

The type of construction of this road is here indicated. The rails were stretched upon ties placed as far apart as the law allowed, and perhaps a little farther.

Next week:

Editor Remsburg of the Vista Press was a business caller at the Ocean Beach News office Monday. Mr. Remsburg is the San Diego County Code authority for weekly newspapers, a most fair and efficient publisher, just in his writings of doings of the north end of the county but fearless too when unjust practices are called to his attention.

April Business Higher Than Year Ago.

The Bank of America index of far western business for April, 1934, registered 65.0, which is the highest point reached in the last 24 months, according to the bank's business review released Saturday. The April, 1934, index was 15 percent higher than April of last year.

The number of employed in manufacturing industries of California was 24.6 percent greater than April one year ago. Payrolls were 32.4 percent above April, 1933. This was the fourth consecutive month, says the business review, in which the manufacturing industries of the state showed gains in both numbers employed and payrolls over the corresponding months of 1933.

The dollar value of retail sales in the Twelfth Federal Reserve District for the first four months of 1934 increased 18.3 percent over the corresponding period of 1933. Every section in the far western area showed substantial gains.

Twenty-seven cities in the Twelfth Federal Reserve District reported bank debits totaling $2,067,734,000 for April, 1934. This is an increase of 25.9 percent over April, 1933, and is indicative of an increasing volume of general business turnover, says the bank's business review.

The number of business failures in the entire far west was 39.7 percent below the number in the corresponding three months of 1933, and 52.5 percent lower than the first quarter of 1932.

MINING ACTIVITY PROSPERS CRIPPLE CREEK

A copy of the Times-Record of Cripple Creek, dated May 23, has reached our office, thru C. D. Lehigh, recent investor at Ocean Beach. The paper says: Colorado weather—warm sunshine and prosperity, and following are a few short sentences of the general situation.

New deal in gold changes picture of Cripple Creek Mining District. People living in tents while carpenters rush construction of homes. Feverish activity in all lines of business. Many new stores opened. Population almost doubles in nine months. Rush of ore swamps mill and railroad. The population of Cripple Creek alone increased from less than 1,400 on August 1, 1933, to 2,185 on March 1, 1934, and all other towns of the mining district as well as the population of the seven hills, increased in proportion. Rush of activity reflected at county offices. Property transfers reach highest level known here in years.

Hurrah for Colorado. Let us hope this prosperity is the beginning of a flood that reaches to every home in the land.

GOVERNOR ROLPH CRITICALLY ILL

Governor Rolph of California has been critically ill for the past week and according to his physicians little chance is held for his recovery.

In case of Rolph's death he will be succeeded by Lieutenant Governor Frank H. Merriam who was elected as Rolph's running mate four years ago. He is a former Iowa farm boy who worked as a janitor to earn his way through college.

COUPLE IS WED AT CHURCH RITE IN VALLEY TOWN

(San Diego Union)
Miss Catherine M. Shepherd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Shepherd of Ocean Beach, and Earl Hoglund, son of Mrs. S. J. Hoglund, were married Sunday in Brawley, at 12:30 p. m., in the Episcopal church. The Rev. Charles Bailey officiated, using the impressive ring ceremony.

The bride was charming in a white crepe ensemble and white hat. She was attended by Miss Boots Shelley, wearing a pink silk ensemble. John Bailey acted as best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoglund were popular members of Point Loma High school's graduating class of 1929. After a wedding trip of a week they will be at home at 4744 Long Branch ave., Ocean Beach.

Geologist Examines Cliffs at Ocean Beach

Sunday last Patrick J. Young, graduate geologist of the University of Southern California, accompanied by Major O. R. Bird, formerly a sports writer with the Los Angeles Times and Examiner, both of whom are at present in the San Ysidro district, visited Ocean Beach to look at the formations in the cliffs near the foot of Orchard avenue. Mr. Young within the week had had his attention called to the formations by letters from W. I. Penny and the editor, both being unaware that the other had written.

For a number of years Capt. Penny has been interested in his discovery of what appears to be the fossils of large reptilian monsters in the cliffs heretofore mentioned. The petrified or rocky formation of a large layer appears to have the forms of prehistoric reptiles or a near relative of that species which may have been overcome in great numbers at this point and the bodies crystallized or petrified.

Captain Penny has the idea that Catalina, San Clemente and other near islands of the Pacific once formed a part of this mainland, and reading that Mr. Young had opinions that somewhat coincided he had taken the liberty to write him.

A close inspection was made of the cliffs, however, the geologist was of the opinion it would be difficult to say, without considerable investigation and research, of just what these formations might have come. The visitors have made considerable study of Southern California geologically and thought possibly the San Andreas fault may have extended to this section eons ago, allowing the Colorado river to empty into the Pacific on the west side of the San Bernardino mountains.

The fact was brought out very decidedly that the formations in the cliffs at Ocean Beach, and especially that section which is now broken off should be a matter of research and study, this part should be dug apart, the formations recovered, and have the close investigation of geologists, before the waves and tides of the ocean destroy what appears to be some real concrete evidence of what previous life inhabited this section many ages ago.

MUSIC INSTRUCTOR WILL TEACH IN HOME

It is always more or less trouble to get the children off to the music teacher, see that they have their music, etc., so now comes Professor Barrett of 1611 Herbert Place, a man of 20 years teaching experience. He will come to your home and give instruction on many musical instruments.

Terms per lesson and other information will be found in our classified advertising, and another item, the last line on each of 5,000 cards we printed for the Professor this week says, musicians furnished for dances, etc.

SINCLAIR GAINING

All the power of money and its false propaganda has failed to halt the increasing popularity of Upton Sinclair, Democratic candidate for governor. Thinking people who have read his Epic plan realize it is a common sense way of dealing with our unemployment and other problems. It is not a plan to socialize the entire State as some would have you believe and none is compelled to enter the state employment system. It gives the unfortunate victims of the depression a chance to earn their own living at productive labor without interfering with private business and takes them off the backs of the small taxpayers. The appropriation this fiscal year for the Department of Public Welfare of San Diego county according to figures in the last Saturday San Diego Sun is $1,153,724.16, an increase of more than $200,000 over last year and does not include State and Federal Relief.

How much longer can you taxpayers stand this?

Kittie A. Snell, manager, Sinclair Headquarters, 625 E St. San Diego.

Pioneer Celebration Meeting Again Tonight

A preliminary meeting of thirty or more citizens was held Monday evening at the Woman's club and decision made to hold an Ocean Beach Pioneers' Barbecue toward the last of June, possibly June 30th.

Frank B. McElwee was elected general chairman of arrangements, Mrs. Winifred Davidson will act in advisory capacity, and all organizations of the beach are asked to lend their assistance in making this celebration a success.

Another meeting will be held Friday evening, June 1st, at the Woman's clubhouse, at 7:30 p. m., when further plans will be discussed, committees appointed and a real start to put over this event, which if it receives the proper cooperation from all citizens who should be interested, will be a most pleasant and interesting gathering.

The Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce will sponsor this celebration and the San Diego Historical Society will aid in making it a genuine Ocean Beach Pioneer celebration.

HIGH SCHOOL SUMMER SESSION SAN DIEGO CITY SCHOOLS

The San Diego public schools are announcing an extensive summer session in which will be offered a wide range of junior and senior high school subjects. This season marks the eleventh consecutive year in which the summer school has operated. Thousands of students from all sections of California and from practically every other state have been in attendance.

The subjects to be offered are standard one semester courses. Students may enroll for either one or two subjects. Classes are held in the forenoon only thus permitting thorough study and also reasonable opportunity for recreation. The summer school operates primarily to enable students to earn credits for graduation which they have lost thru illness or absence. However, many make use of the opportunity to improve their skill in vocational subjects also as a means of profitable use of leisure time.

The session will begin June 18, and will continue for six weeks, school being in session six days per week. Bulletins giving complete details are being supplied from the summer school office, located at the San Diego high school.

NEWLYWEDS ENTERTAIN FRIENDS SATURDAY NIGHT

On Thursday, May 24th Harry Holliday and Mrs. Edna Milligan were married at their home, 4820 Cape May avenue.

On Saturday, May 27th, they entertained friends in honor of the occasion. The rooms were beautifully decorated with spring flowers and brides roses. There was music and dancing. At midnight a delicious buffet supper was served to Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Derrick, Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Casteen, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Hogan, Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Holdridge, Mr. Bert Hines and Miss Diamond Wilson.

GIVEN 30 DAYS FOR EXPOSING SELF ON BEACH

Walter E. Conniff who gave his address as 4070 Van Dyke avenue, San Francisco, was last week arrested for exposing himself unclad at Mission Beach.

The case was such that local police as well as PTA and society welfare officials interested themselves to the extent that the man was found guilty of the charge and is now reported as serving 30 days in the San Diego county jail.

If outside influence had not been interested in seeing this man punished for his indecency, there is little doubt but the practice of questionable attorneys would have been able to free him on payment of a small fine or perhaps less punishment.

Insull, Brought Back for Trial, Defends Himself—Token Payments on War Debts Are Barred—Compromise Silver Bill Being Formulated.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SAMUEL INSULL, once the grand old man of public utilities, has been brought home to be tried for his alleged sins after his long period of refuge in foreign lands.

His "prison ship," the Exilona, arrived off Fort Hancock, N. J., and Insull was taken off at open sea by the United States coast guard cutter Hudson, which landed him quickly. After an automobile ride to Princeton Junction, he was put aboard a train and transported swiftly to Chicago. His son, Samuel Insull, Jr., had been permitted to join him on the Exilona and accompanied him on the trip west.

Landing on American soil, Insull appeared to recover his old time confidence. To reporters he said: "I am in America to make the most important fight of my life. I am fighting not only for freedom but for complete vindication. I have erred, but my greatest error was in underestimating the effects of the financial panic on American securities, and particularly on the companies I was trying to build."

"I worked with all my energy to save those companies. I made mistakes—but they were honest mistakes. They were errors in judgment, but not dishonest manipulations."

"Arbitrarily, I had been instructed to resign as head of these companies which I had built and which I had tried to protect."

"I was told that I was no longer needed. Tired from the fruitless struggles to save the investments of thousands of men and women, discouraged in my attempts to save the investments of my friends and associates as well as everything I had, I got out."

"No charges were brought against me until I had been away for three months. My return at that time would have further complicated the problems of the reorganization of the companies."

"The whole story has not yet been told. You only know the charges of the prosecution. Not one word has been uttered in even feeble defense of me. And it must be obvious that there also is my side of the story."

"When it is told in court, my judgment may be discredited, but certainly my honesty will be vindicated."

RUSSIA has been angered by a ruling of Attorney General Cummings and there is danger that all the plans for re-establishing trade with that country will go awry. Mr. Cummings was called on to determine what nations would be barred by the Johnson act from marketing their securities in this country or in any way receiving financial assistance. This he did by announcing the six foreign nations that are not in default to the United States government on their obligations. These are Finland, Great Britain, Czechoslovakia, Italy, Latvia and Lithuania. Finland has met in full all installments on its war debt. The others have made token payments on recent installments.

Immediately after the attorney general's ruling was made public it was authoritatively stated in Washington that President Roosevelt had decided to accept no more token payments; therefore England and the others that have made such payments will fall into the default class on June 15, when the next payments are due. Even Finland may now default. If the nations proffer token payments they may be accepted by the treasury as "on account," but the nations will still be held in default and thus will be shut out under the new Johnson act from obtaining any government loans in the United States.

The President will inform congress, it is reported, that he desires no legislation at this time with respect to the debt question.

Soviet Russia fell in the default class because it ignored obligations of the preceding czarist and Kerensky governments.

AIMING directly at the American Telephone and Telegraph company and the Western Union company, both of which are said to have defied him, Recovery Administrator Johnson made public a drastic code for the wire communications industry prepared by his own staff. Imposition of a code is regarded to all intents the same as writing law for the industry affected, equal in scope to the authorization for licensing industry. Nothing like it has been resorted to heretofore.

In the telegraph case, with all but one minority group flatly opposed to any code, the NRA is proposing to change long-standing conditions and alter the internal economy of the industry on the ground that existing conditions burden commerce and reduce employment. A date for hearings was set, after which the President was to be asked to take action.

The code, if adopted, would deprive extensive interests of financial advantages amounting to many millions of dollars, the NRA authorities declaring these are not fairly held. Among the things it would abolish are: Exclusive rights of the Western Union Telegraph company to something like $25,000,000 worth of business annually; use by many corporations of private wire circuits leased at figures alleged to be out of line with regular charges for the same volume of business, and free use of these circuits by clients of the lessees to the tune of millions of dollars worth of words each year.

DRASTIC reorganization of the NRA to give the federal government a permanent balance of power between large and small industries was recommended in the majority report by the Barrow board, which President Roosevelt decided not to make public in its original form but referred to three government agencies for preliminary digesting.

On the theory that the NRA has shown business incapability of self-regulation, the 5-to-1 majority report proposes to scrap all the present code authorities in favor of an entirely new set-up in which the federal government, big business and little business have equal voting representation.

SOME sort of a compromise on silver legislation that will be acceptable to both the White House and the silver bloc in congress is likely to be worked out, though Senator Borah, who wants outright remonetization of the white metal, thought the plan being prepared would not serve. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and eight silver senators held prolonged conferences, and all but the gentleman from Idaho were fairly well satisfied. Senator King of Utah said he hoped for a bill which would nationalize silver bullion and provide for the establishment of a 25 per cent silver reserve for currency. Probably the measure will be mandatory as to policies and permissive in leaving to the discretion of the President the means of carrying out the policies.

Secretary Morgenthau

TO AVOID impending defeat by the senate, the President withdrew from its consideration the names of two men he had appointed to office. One was Willard L. Thorp who had been made head of the Commerce department's bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. The senate's objection to Mr. Thorp, who has been serving as head of the commerce bureau pending action on his nomination, was based on the fact that he once registered as a Republican in a Massachusetts primary.

The other withdrawal was of Rene A. Viosca as United States attorney for the Eastern district of Louisiana. He was opposed by Senator Huey P. Long.

ANDREW W. MELLON, the venerable and wealthy ex-secretary of the treasury and former ambassador to England, came out on top in his latest contest with the Department of Justice. The government had accused him of evading his income taxes and sought his indictment by a federal grand jury in Pittsburgh. However, the grand jury refused to return a true bill, declaring the charges were without basis.

The foreman of the jury was William Beeson, a bank clerk. Among others on the jury were five laborers, two farmers, two engineers, two mechanics, two clerks, one plumber, one carpenter, a lumber dealer, and a writer.

Mr. Mellon said: "I am of course gratified that I have been exonerated by a jury of my fellow citizens. The fact that the grand jury reached a sound conclusion, notwithstanding the unusual methods pursued in my case, is proof of the good sense and fairness of the American people."

The finding of the jury probably ended finally the affair, Mr. Cummings saying the government would not challenge the decision. It may also put an end to the not infrequent attacks on Mr. Mellon in congress.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is again a grandfather, for down in Fort Worth, Texas, a daughter has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt. The baby, who weighed six pounds six ounces, has been named Ruth Chandler Roosevelt.

AIR mail flying by the army has come to an end, and the routes are being taken over by commercial aviation as fast as the short term contracts are let.

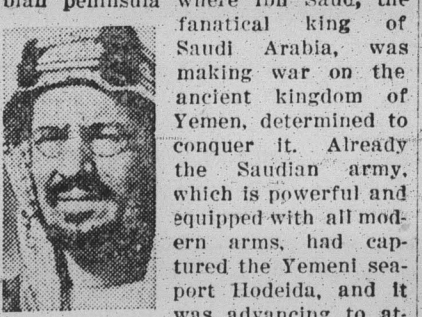

HOW the League of Nations proposes to aid China was told in a long report, made public by the Nanking government, covering the arrangement made by Dr. Ludwig Rajchman, representative in China of the league. This plan, it is supposed, led to Japan's recent statement of a policy demanding that other nations keep their hands off China. The document was politically innocuous, being chiefly the recommendations of technical advisers for projects designed to attract foreign capital to China and consolidate it as an independent nation. The list of advisers did not include any Japanese.

The chief interest in the report, from the standpoint of the United States, concerned the section devoted to cotton. It shows that China must purchase about $60,000,000 worth of raw cotton annually, most of which comes from the United States.

The report also proposes an extensive road building program which is likely to improve the market for American cars as well as gasoline.

A Chinese national military and communications commission has just left Shanghai for the United States by way of Europe. Its twenty-two members are instructed to learn how China can acquire a modern war machine and methods of communication that are up to western standards.

REPORTS from Cairo, Egypt, told somewhat hazily about fierce fighting that was going on in the Arabian peninsula where Ibn Saud, the fanatical king of Saudi Arabia, was making war on the ancient kingdom of Yemen, determined to conquer it. Already the Saudian army, which is powerful and equipped with all modern arms, had captured the Yemeni seaport Hodeida, and it was advancing to attack Sana, the capital. The war started with a border dispute.

Ibn Saud

According to the conflicting stories reaching Cairo, both sides claimed victory. One report was that the Emir Faisal, heir of Ibn Saud, had overtaken and defeated the rear guard of the retreating Yemeni army.

From Yemeni officials, however, came telegrams stating that their retreat had been halted and that the Saudian army suffered a severe defeat in a 23-hour battle. Capture of 36 armored cars, nine of them undamaged; 36 guns, and 400 prisoners was claimed by the premier of Yemen, who wired that the Saudian casualties exceeded 2,000.

Because of their nearby territories in Asia and Africa, Great Britain, Italy, and France were watching the conflict with deep concern and all had warships at hand to protect their interests.

HUSBANDS and wives who want to be divorced—and lots of them do—may now accomplish their purpose in conjunction with a pleasant visit to Cuba, which is bidding for the American divorce business. President Men-deta signed a decree that shortens the time required to get mutual consent divorces from three years to six months. It also provides that, instead of three appearances before the court at intervals of six months, the parties may make three appearances 30 days apart. Four new causes are added to the 15 recognized as grounds for divorce. They are bigamy, vice or immorality, use of any drug, and disparity of character.

GREAT BRITAIN and Japan are on the verge of a big trade war. The British have threatened to take strong action to protect their textile export interests against increasing Japanese competition, although the British government officially declares it will do everything to maintain amicable relations with Japan. The official position in Tokyo is that Japan can take care of herself, and there was every indication that it would not yield to the British ultimatum that it must modify its trade program and tactics. The British already have begun to impose quotas on Japanese goods, but trade leaders in Tokyo said this would not hurt their country seriously, especially since Japan's imports from the British Isles in 1933 totaled $3,000,000 yen or almost as much as was exported there, $0,000,000 yen. Hence, they said, the Tokyo government would be able to make reprisals.

Trade with the British dominions is considered far more important and the Japanese are confident the dominions will not follow the mother country's lead—especially Australia, which sold to Japan in 1933 four times its purchases, and Canada, which sold seven times as much as it bought.

ACCORDING to the unanimous report of a house committee of investigation, Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the army air corps, acted "in clear violation of existing law" in the proposed purchase of airplanes costing $7,500,000.

Coupled with the criticism of Foulois was a commendation of Harry H. Woodring, assistant secretary of war. The report stated that late in 1933 the Public Works administration set aside $7,500,000 for the purchase of army airplanes. It asserted that Foulois had decided to buy the planes, without competition, from the Northrup corporation, the Boeing Airplane company and the Glenn L. Martin company. On Woodring's insistence, the plan for direct purchases was dropped and specifications drawn on which competitive bids were asked.

One Man's Lifeboat

The new motor lifeboat now in service at St. Ives, in Cornwall, has replaced a craft with a remarkable rescue record—and a very interesting story. This old boat, the James Stevens No. 10, which had seen 34 years' service and saved 227 lives, was the last of 20 lifeboats all bearing the name James Stevens. Forty years ago the Royal National Lifeboat Institution received a legacy of £50,000—the largest in its history—under the will of James Stevens of Birmingham. The testator stipulated that the money should be spent on the construction of 20 lifeboats, all bearing his name. The first of these was launched in 1896, and went to the Isle of Man. Others were sent to Grimsby, Eastbourne, Southend-on-Sea, Swansea and other places. The 20 saved a total of 1,072 lives.

Fruits and Vegetables Are Better Than Drugs.

By EDITH M. BARBER

ARE you taking your spring tonic regularly? Perhaps I ought to say tonics, because the modern spring tonic does not come out of one bottle, and we eat as well as drink it. The reason why people found it necessary to resort to spring tonics was because in a time when fresh fruits and vegetables were seldom obtainable during the winter months, they naturally suffered with that feeling of enervation, which is known as spring fever.

Rhubarb and soda and dandelion greens were other popular and more pleasant spring dosages. We prefer to take our rhubarb fresh, and we welcome its appearance on the market in such liberal quantities. Dandelion greens, served as a salad, or cooked, make a pleasant change from the usual lettuce or spinach. Here are some dishes which are real spring tonics.

Dandelion Greens.

Wash thoroughly, remove roots, drain and cook with a little water until tender, about fifteen to twenty minutes. Season with butter, pepper and salt. Serve with vinegar.

Rhubarb Roll.

2 cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ tablespoons shortening
½ cup cold water
1½ cups brown sugar
1½ tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup chopped nuts
¾ cup seeded raisins
1 pound rhubarb, peeled and cut in to thin slices

Sift flour, salt, sugar and baking powder into a bowl. Rub in the shortening and add enough water to form a paste. Roll one-half inch thick and spread with a mixture of the brown sugar, flour, nutmeg, nuts, raisins and rhubarb. Roll like jelly roll, fastening ends securely. Place on a greased baking sheet and brush top with water. Bake about forty-five minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit). Serve hot.

Rhubarb and Orange Salad.

2 cups steamed rhubarb (cooked with a little sugar)
2 oranges
French dressing
Fresh mint
Lettuce or romaine
Chill the rhubarb and pare and slice the oranges. Arrange the fruit in alternate layers on the lettuce and cover with french dressing. Sprinkle with finely minced mint leaves and garnish with mint sprigs.

Tomato Juice Cocktail.

1 pint tomato juice
2 teaspoons tarragon
2 teaspoons basil
½ teaspoon salt
Few grains cayenne
1 teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Few drops onion juice
Heat the tomato juice with the herbs; add salt, cayenne and sugar, and allow the mixture to stand for an hour or more; add lemon juice and onion juice; strain and serve.

Caramel Pudding.

1 cup brown sugar
2 cups milk
¼ cup flour
2 eggs
Scald one and one-half cups milk in double boiler with sugar. Mix flour and beaten egg yolks and the remaining half cup of milk and add to the hot milk, stirring constantly until it thickens. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Serve cold with whipped cream.

Tomato Surprise Salad.

6 tomatoes
½ cup diced celery
½ cup diced, cooked chicken
¼ cup chopped nuts
¼ cup mayonnaise dressing
Lettuce
Select medium-sized, smooth tomatoes and scoop out the inside. Chill ingredients, mix the chicken, cucumber, tomato pulp, and nuts with mayonnaise dressing. Add more salt if needed. Fill the tomatoes. Arrange on lettuce leaves leaves. Garnish with mayonnaise and decorate each tomato with halves of shelled nuts.

The collection, lent to the museum by Mrs. Francis T. Renwood of Baltimore, contains such well-known wares as Staffordshire, Spode, Bow, Worcester, Lowestoft, Dresden, Royal and Sevres.

It will be exhibited in the ceramics division of the arts and industries building.

HOW IT STARTED

By JEAN NEWTON

That Word "Bimbo"

WHO would have thought that we should find a history for the term "bimbo"? Probably the reader who asked for it regarded himself as an optimist.

"Bimbo" has always been slang, but we have a record of it as early as 1837 when the Boston Transcript described it as "a rascally compound of brandy and sugar flavored with lemon peel," and the Baltimore Commercial Transcript called it "an invention of the devil."

"Bimbo" is Italian for "baby" and the connection between this and strong drink is not very plain unless we assume that one who loved his drink might call it his baby! The theory has been advanced that the connection is really with Barbados rum, "bim" being a nickname for a Barbadian!

Today, as closely as this column can determine, "bimbo" is college slang specifically for a "girl with a telephone number."

Turkey Counts Children of Polygamous Unions

Istanbul.—Polygamy has been forbidden by law in Turkey since 1926. But numbers of clandestine polygamous unions have taken place since then.

Parents of the unregistered offspring of these illegal unions now are being asked to declare their "hidden children" so that they may be made rightful citizens of the republic.

Tens of thousands of these "illegitimate" children are being registered in every province, the parents being pardoned under the amnesty law of last year.

It is expected the census of the country will rise from 14,000,000 to 18,000,000 as a result of the addition of these and other unregistered persons.

It is noteworthy, however, that only the children of the illegal unions are being recognized. The post-1926 polygamous parents are not allowed to have their unions registered as marriages.

Lights of New York

By L. L. STEVENSON

What tunes, hand organs? The question came up in Magistrate Louis B. Brodsky's court in Yorkville recently. Dominick Cassello was the cause. Cassello has spent 30 of his 52 years grinding out music on the sidewalks of New York. But he turned the crank too close to a hospital and the police got him. It seems, however, that the charge was merely technical. It wasn't the hand organ but the choice of music that aroused the ire of patients to such an extent that they complained and Cassello was pinched. He preferred the old tunes, the ones he had listened to when first he exposed his teeth in a flashing smile in exchange for coins. The judge held with the prosecution. "After the Ball," "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" and other similarly dated airs were not for moderns. "Get hot," he said in effect to Cassello and Cassello promised somewhat sadly, however, since a change meant altering the entire "inards" of the organ.

While hesitating to criticize an opinion of a magistrate, especially one delivered from the bench, there are those who hold that Magistrate Brodsky may have erred just a trifle. "Smoke Gets Into Your Eyes" or "I Saw a Dream Walking" or any of the airs of today that are played to death over the radio, they believe, have no place in a hand organ. The hand organ as a musical instrument belongs to another generation. Hence, "Little Annie Rooney," "Bicycle Built for Two," "Ta-ra-ra Boom de Ay" and possibly "Sweet Marie," are the proper repertoire since they bring back memories of the little old New York of hansom cabs, gas lights and bicycle cops. In fact, while discussing the verdict of the magistrate, a number of addicts of old-time music for old-time hand organs became quite sentimental.

The matter is of some importance. Not the pussy willow, the sweet smelling green bud of the lilacs or even the red-breasted robin is the real official spring harbinger here. The hurdy gurdy or hand organ is. Personally, I don't care what is being played so long as I see tenement kids dancing on the sidewalks.

Speaking of tenements, and it was done deliberately in the preceding paragraph, the old rookeries of the lower East Side have been much in the public eye lately because of the determined campaign of Langdon W. Post, tenement house commissioner, to do away with fire traps. Conditions that have shocked the public have been known to social workers and many others for years. In fact, it was a long time ago that the late Jacob Riis brought them to the consciousness of the public with his, "How the Other Half Live." There are about 3,000,000 tenement dwellers in New York and about 167,000 families live in "old law" tenements which have no fire escapes other than ropes. Hence New York's smoke eaters can tell a lot about tenement conditions. If it wasn't for their bravery and efficiency the death toll, heavy now, would be much heavier.

There are sections where there are tenements in the rear of other tenements, the houses in the back being reached by long, often dark, hallways through the houses in front. Once upon a time, the houses in the rear were the homes of the wealthy. They were built far back so that the owners might have green gardens between them and the street. When the great immigration wave came, the tenements were built and the poor swept over once aristocratic sections.

Some of the lower East side sections are still 100 per cent foreign born. The percentage of illiteracy is higher there than anywhere else in the city. Foreign language letter writers make regular visits to the tenements to read letters received and write others.

MERITED CANDIDATES.

We are shaping plans and making preparation for a most important and vital biennial state election. The chiefest concern is the selection of upright candidates for Congressmen and members of the State Legislature. A capable California governor is among the selective list of candidates. That our interests in State affairs demand sober action and conservative deliberation, is one of the major considerations not to be ignored, from a moral and economic standpoint.

We are facing grave situations this fall, but with little exciting or earnest attention. Unless we break away from our political calm and campaign routine, the forthcoming event will only just be another election. This is true in every branch of local and state government. Thus, early, we should be putting candidates to the test, based on moral standards. We are not insistent enough with office-seekers. Since all men are equal politically, and everyone has the natural right to hold any office he can get regardless of his qualifications, he often gets elected by the appalling lack of fairness or good government principles. Such a candidate is a betrayer of citizenship and should never get before the public as a servant of the people.

Politics seem to flourish as a foe against character and fitness. Justice should begin at the ballot box, and then to differentiate by defying men to stand by as adamant; unconquerable and worthy to serve. We can have as honest and as competent public representatives as any other commonwealth whenever we arouse ourselves long enough to demand the establishment of a merit system for all public office.

PRAYING CONGRESSMEN

We are proud of our great United States of America, the most ideal government in the whole world. For over 158 years we have stood the test of our hard won liberties and sung the tune of happiness and prosperity with all the freedom of a contented mind. We made a supreme start under the Star Spangled Banner, the flag that draped our Jeffersonian Constitution, the greatest charter of human liberty that the world has ever known, and by the same emblematic colors that have proclaimed our freedom during all these many years.

At first glance, from a mental standpoint, we need to be careful unless we become careless in standing by our colonial principles of government. The fidelity of our Congressmen today to those strict Democratic precepts are not altogether altruistic. There is a wider latitude held out in the bounds of common justice. Some of the sacred obligations of those days are not revered today, but instead spiteful and hateful debates, where language is uncouth and unbecoming are heard on the floors of parliament.

Being elected to Congress is something infinitely more important than getting a passport to Washington, D. C., or putting over intrigues to secretly deal for private or selfish aggrandizement.

Government must be continued upon the principles of the Puritan fathers, if it succeeds. Righteousness cannot prevail or endure in any other source. President Washington and his cabinet members usually passed from a prayer-meeting into the chambers of congress. The laws of their day were adequate for peace and liberty. What about a prayer-meeting today?

It is a strange fact that many people who bathe in the ocean, continue their fearlessness and lose their life in a rip-tide. Of all the beach dangers there is nothing so formidable as a cruel undertow known as the riptide. It comes upon you with dramatic suddenness and most usually claims its victim. Although the Pacific ocean is so called because it is the most pacific of all water bodies, yet it is the biggest thing in the world. Why should't life be helpless in such a gigantic body when its forces combine and carry in its wake, power enough to move a mountain. The ocean is so large that if the whole land content of the two Americas, Asia, Africa, Australia and Europe were dumped into its basin, it could inclose the lot and, have 20,000,000 square miles of water left with which to surround them! It is deep enough to submerge the Himalayas, and have 5000 feet to spare. Now they tell us that the bed of the ocean was made by a celestial convulsion which caused the formation of the moon. Compare human helplessness with the ocean! BE CAREFUL BATHING IN THE OCEAN!

Nothing will lead the way to a unity of purpose in our national affairs like the practice of the Golden Rule. If this could be realized everywhere from the legislative halls of justice to each lowly walk in life, perhaps views of a national, state and municipal import would be more concrete and vastly less of the abstract. We have had our economic "spree," and know what the results have lead to. We are face to face with the facts, and there is need of a more generous interest in each one of us toward the other fellow. The selfish orgy has gripped the American purse, and as the old saying goes, a man wrapped up in himself makes a very small package.

Is there a better alarm clock than the barnyard rooster, for he never lays down on the job. He stretches his neck and expands his lungs at the first streak of dawn and with the exception of a few silent intervals he keeps up his crowing till the fading hour of morning. Most of us like to lie abed in the morning but this king and chanticleer struts around and crows about getting up. The crowing rooster has caused more neighborhood fights and court actions than all the gossip you can stir up. All you can say about the rooster is a mighty good trouble maker and the best place to put him is in a basting pan and brown him good in the oven.

How many times our perspective in life is spoiled when there is no outlook. It is said that one of the ways to commit mental suicide is just to do nothing about what you really know. May be we are largely to blame for our conditions and circumstances, but that is too severe an indictment to place upon the unfortunate. However Shakespeare says, "our doubts are traitors, and make us lose the good we oft might win by fearing to attempt."

Of San Diego County, California
(Incorporated)

May 22, 1934

Mr. H. H. Hartvigsen, Secy-Treas.
Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce
Ocean Beach, Calif.

Dear Sir:

We have just received your letter and checks this morning for $90.80.

We do appreciate the interest you have shown in this drive for a therapeutic pool for the crippled children, and are grateful for the amount you sent in. We want to thank every organization and individual who helped make the benefit dance and card party the success it was. Special mention should be given the Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the American Legion and their auxiliaries.

Ground was broken May 15, 1934 at the pool site. The Helping Hand Home for Children at 850 south 36th street. Work is now going on at the pool, and in the near future will be completed. Then the little cripples will have a new hope in life and be able to use their wasted arms and legs again. What a feeling of satisfaction it will be to us all who helped in any way to know that due to our efforts, this has been made possible.

Sincerely yours,

Mrs. J. M. McColl, General Chairman

OCEAN BEACH POST
AUXILIARY No. 433

Under the auspices of Grace Chadwick, unit president, Ocean Beach American Legion auxiliary No. 433, conducted a most impressive and fitting Memorial day program at the Ocean Beach school. Tuesday morning, May 29. The program was held at the regular morning assembly and carried out the ritual of the auxiliary which is used at every regular meeting of the unit. Advance of the colors by Louise Eulberg, color bearer and Sgt. at arms, was accompanied by Elizabeth Finley at the piano.

A recitation was given by Ralph Chadwick, a son of a Legionaire, "The Flag goes by." Anna Forsythe sang, "America The Beautiful," accompanied by Helen Parks at the piano. Lawrence Eulberg gave a reading explaining to the school the meaning of Memorial day. Pearl Wood, Americanization chairman, explained to the children about displaying the flag and why we sell the veteran made poppies on Memorial day.

The auxiliary was honored by the presence of the post commander Elmer Steele.

Children wearing the juniors caps and capes were Alice Pearl Hall, Ilene Eulberg, Betty Schumacher and Sally Medlar. Mrs. Marian Sharpe, first vice president of the unit assisted in program arrangements.

The auxiliary is very pleased with the opportunity, so graciously extended by the school principal, Richmond Barbour to show with what dignity and earnestness, the work of the unit is being carried on.

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

"Why is there so much evil in the world? Why evil at all?" asked Prof. H. A. Fussell in the course of his address in the Temple of Peace on Point Loma last Sunday afternoon, and went on to explain: "All things in the universe act according to their own inherent nature. How can all these entities in varying stages of development progress without coming into conflict? Existence of any kind is impossible without action, which in its turn its influence through the universe. Evil is due to the conflict of wills among these evolving beings, and this conflict is inevitable. Good and evil are relative things. What is good in one state of development may be bad in a higher stage: good is that which is in harmony with the laws or habits of being which govern any given state of evolution and evil is that which acting in opposition to these laws and habits, tends towards destruction and discord."

On Sunday, June 3rd, Miss Helen Savage will present the subject of "Symbolism and its Application to Life" in a forum-lecture to commence at 3 o'clock in the Temple on Point Loma. This is a fascinating subject, for symbols comprise a concise mystery-language and the power of their influence over human minds is easily recognised when we consider the symbols of the cross and the circle. How can we use symbols to further the culture of future civilizations?

THE RIVER OF LIFE

The Ocean Beach Theosophical club will meet on Thursday evening June 7, at 7:30 in room 4 of the Ocean Beach school to study the nature of man's development. The class is open to the public.

And in this dream her soul took flight,
And ascended the golden, circular stair
That leads to Heaven, and all things fair.
At the Pearly Gates, Saint Peter sat,
Absorbed, if you please, in the U. S. Cat.
She gave her name and occupation,
With proper poise and modulation.
"Where you are from we must affix."
"Nine-seven-nine-point-four-six."
All this was written with her rank,
A regular application blank.
Two bright wings and a harp of gold,
Were given her to wear and hold.
"My labor is o'er," she softly sighed,
"On yonder cloud I'll sit and glide."
But, WAIT . . . a line of angels passed,
And asked her questions, thick and fast.
"Tell me, what do gypsies wear?"
"Did Cleopatra dye her hair?"
"Won't you give John the facts of life?"
"Did King Arthur have a wife?"
"Have you got plans for a motor-boat?"
"What shall I feed my Nanny-goat?"
"For a bright green lawn, which seed is best?"
"How should my daughter treat a guest?"
"How much lumber does it take
To build a lattice o'er a gate?"
"Do flying-fishes really fly?"
"What time does the bus go by?"
"I want figured up-to-date,
That tell how tennis players rate."
"How many islands in the ocean?"
"What causes perpetual motion?"
For seven hours the crowd filed past,
And then—'twas nine o'clock at last.
She "chucked" the wings and harp of gold.
Her head was hot, her feet were cold.
While stumbling down the Golden Stair,
She visioned her old swivel chair.
Dreams of Heaven are mental toys,
Hence then, "vain deluding Joys."

YOUR CHILD AND THE SCHOOL

By Dr. ALLEN G. IRELAND
Director, Physical and Health Education
New Jersey State Department of Public Instruction

Not Free to Gain

While visiting a school recently, I noticed a little girl whom I mentally catalogued as a case of malnutrition. When the opportunity came I asked her how much milk she was drinking. To my surprise she answered "a quart a day."

This called for investigation, so I sought the principal and the school nurse for information. From them I learned what we should all suspect in similar cases. This child was not "free to gain," because in spite of the milk, her habits and handicaps were such as to offset the benefits.

At home she was allowed to stay up until a very late hour listening to the radio, and two or three nights every week she went to the late movies with her parents. Her teeth were in very bad condition. Several times a year she suffered attacks of tonsillitis. Her diet was deficient in vegetables and fruits, and at the table she was called "finicky." The moral is "don't expect miracles without first removing all obstacles."

The "perfect attendance" game, in which children are the pawns, will be discussed by Dr. Ireland next week.

Point Loma High School

Tommyanne Clark and Jim Couche are new members of the Quill and Scroll chapter at Point Loma. They were inducted Tuesday, May 29, at La Jolla high school.

Recognition is given to Ruth Lindberg for her able assistance at the Point Loma Hi-lights. She assisted the girls' physical education department by accompanying the dances on the piano. Her help is also recognized by the junior high glee club.

Senior A ditch day will be held Monday, June 4, at Del Mar. Transportation will be arranged in the form of a caravan of cars, which will start about 9:30 a. m.

Miss Cecelia Collier has in her office a new water color picture painted by Frances Box. Frances Box is now attending State college.

The boys of Miss Shafer's home room gave the girls of that home room a party Friday, May 25. The party was given after school in room 105. Games were played and entertainment was given, after which refreshments were served.

Herbert Hoover high school entertained executives from San Diego, Point Loma and La Jolla high schools Friday evening with a delightful dance in the Hoover library. Executives and their friends from Point Loma that attended were Barbara Sloane, Jack Fitzgerald, Anita Agard, Bob McBride, Betty Jean Blevins, Alex Jeffares, Pauline Kearns, Chas. Springstead, Virginia Riehle, David Fenn, Marjorie Ernsting, Nan Watson, Jack Thompson.

The Jr. High Honor society made plans at a meeting on Monday, May 28, for a beach party at Mission Beach on Friday, June 1. Committees have been appointed for transportation, refreshments, games, etc. It is the annual party and it is enjoyed by all the society members.

Nothing adds more to the attractiveness of the home than tastefully arranged cut flowers. To make your cut flowers last longer, add sugar to the water in the vases. The proportions are about a level teaspoonful of sugar to a pint of water. Every third day cut off about a quarter of an inch from the ends of the stems, using a very sharp knife or razor blade.

Camp Fire Girls

At the annual grand Council Fire of the San Diego county council, the Wanca Huta group of Ocean Beach was exceptionally well represented. National honors in health and thrift were awarded to Betty Deuel. A three year honor was given to Zaza Daun. Florence McCausland was awarded her ceremonial gown for selling 75 dozen doughnuts. A "Uta" of decoration was received by Betty Deuel, who also received her Fire-maker's rank. Wood-gatherer's rank was awarded to Pauline Gates, Geraldine Gates, Charlotte Peltcher, Leona Padgett, Florence McCausland, and Evelyn Stewart. All of the girls received their 100% Vesper service honor and the large and small doughnut honors. Swimming honors were awarded to Betty Deuel, Zaza Daun, Barbara Douglass, Gertrude Zoschke, Pauline Gates, Florence McCausland, Evelyn Stewart, Charlotte Peltcher and Margaret Heryet.

A beautiful Camp Fire banner was presented to the group in recognition of other outstanding work in the Olympiad contest.

The Wanca Huta group has a hobby,—early history. Each year Camp Fire girls have a birthday project. This year it is hobbies. The Wanca Hutases have taken the early history of San Diego as their own special study, as a group. Mrs. Winifred Davidson accompanied the girls over the early trails, telling them the history of each important place and showing them the memorable spots of early San Diego.

They were very proud when Mrs. Davidson wrote four beautiful tableaux, portraying the story of Margaret McGregor's shawl. The first tableau was of Father Serra and two attendant priests giving the little Indian girl, Petronella, a holy medalion. The part of Father Serra was taken by Katherine Coull, the two priests, Charlotte Peltcher and Marie McCormick. The Indian girl, Betty Deuel. The second tableau showed Petronella (Shirley Wickern) grown up and giving the medalion to her son Pedro (Barbara Douglass). In the third scene Dona Rita (Margaret Heryet) enters the Mission wearing a beautiful red shawl. The beauty of the color dazzles the Indians (Evelyn Stewart, Betty Connors, Jane Craig, Joan Soper and Leona Padgett) who gather round Dona Rita much to the dismay of the priests and the church people, (Florence McCausland, Pauline and Geraldine Gates, and Gertrude Zoschke). Dona Rita is requested not to wear the shawl to church again. The last tableaux shows Dona Rita exchanging the shawl for Pedro's sacred medalion. This is a true story and the medalion may be seen in the San Diego Mission.

These beautiful historical scenes were given by the girls of this group at the grand council last Saturday. Miss Margaret Shea of the Ocean Beach school read the script. The costumes were loaned by Mrs. Shields Miss Shea and Mrs. Wilhoit.

Warren-Walker School News

Miss Ruth Price, a member of the faculty of the Warren-Walker school has been attending classes and demonstrations at the Y.W.C.A. preparatory to receiving her Examiner's Life-Saving certificate before going, in the capacity of senior counsellor, to Famarac camp at Big Bear lake.

Miss Grace Walker, assistant supervisor of music in Brawley schools, is joining the faculty of the Warren-Walker school. Special work in piano, under her supervision, has been arranged for during the summer months.

Mrs. Walker feels that she is most fortunate in securing Miss Shultz, well-known instructress of applied arts, clay modeling and sculpturing, to fill the need of supervised, constructive, recreation during the summer.

Peter and Ross Tirano of Brawley, California were enrolled in school this week for the remainder of this semester and summer school.

SYNOPSIS

Ranceford Kershaw, last male member of the Kershaw clan, dies suddenly while riding with his daughter, Lorry. Years before, at the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for ranching and cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley.

On the crest of the spur they halted. Directly below them lay another valley even larger than Eden Valley, but save on its eastern side it was not timbered. Nor was it, even remotely, as verdant as Eden Valley.

"There," cried Robin Kershaw triumphantly, "is the land that needs the water old Mother Nature is wastin' off yonder. Some day when we're gone, our children will build that dam I spoke of, back the floor waters up most to the crest of this spur, cut a canal across or drive a tunnel an' lead the water off down yonder. Good farmin' valley there, Lorry."

He continued: "No, the Lord ain't treated yonder valley jest right. I reckon it gits enough rainfall to make it fair dry-farmin' land, but come a dry year or a succession of dry years an' that valley'll sure raise a crop of broken hearts. Lorry, I sort o' figger we'd ought to call that country yonder Forlorn Valley."

"I christen thee Forlorn Valley," the girl answered, and blew a kiss into the solitude. Then, together, they rode down into it.

CHAPTER II

They spent that first summer in tents, while Kershaw and his men felled trees, peeled the bark from the logs and dragged them out into the sunshine to season. They dug a well, got out fence posts, and enclosed horse pasture with a stake-and-rider fence; and when the logs had been seasoned by late fall, they built a spacious and comfortable log house with a wide veranda around it.

The following spring Kershaw brought in fifteen thousand head of cattle. They were scrubs--old Spanish-California stock; but they were the only cattle he could buy and, since his feed cost him nothing, he was content with them and the profit he knew he would make after growing them out. Deer, elk, and antelope were plentiful, so he never slaughtered a steer for meat. He prospered.

For the succeeding eight years he was not disturbed. A few nesters came into the valley and set up small herds, but there was plenty of grass for everybody. After 1862, when the homestead law was enacted by congress, men began to come in and file on homesteads. Robin Kershaw and his wife immediately filed homestead grazing claims on the two sections immediately surrounding their ranch headquarters; thus, to a considerable extent, availing themselves of the first riparian rights on Eden Valley creek.

With the proclamation of the war between the states fully half the settlers in Eden Valley volunteered for service in both armies. One of the first recruits to the Union army from California was Robin Kershaw, despite the fact that he was now the father of six children.

He returned with a permanent limp in his left leg and the title of major, to find that his business had prospered. With the farms of the Middle West denuded of their cattle to a large extent by the war, beef prices were up, so Kershaw sold every head of stock he possessed and shipped them to Chicago and Kansas City via the newly built Central Pacific railroad. Then, with his checkbook, he commenced the elimination of his neighbors in Eden Valley.

By 1870 he owned in fee fifty thousand acres of Eden Valley--and then Joel Hensley, late of the Confederate army, came. Hensley had some capital and he, too, yearned for Eden Valley. He outbid Robin Kershaw for the lower half of the valley, and Kershaw let him have it, for, after all, Eden Valley was large enough for two, and Kershaw knew he had the cream of it.

Almost before he realized it was impending he had a bitter quarrel with Joel Hensley. Like Kershaw, Hensley was a Texan--a fierce, belligerent man of the breed that was responsible for the most heroic and dramatic epiphany in history:

"The Thermopylae Had Its Messenger of Defeat--The Alamo Had None!"

Kershaw had fenced off his portion of the valley, and in common justice, he asked Joel Hensley to pay for half this fencing. Hensley, glancing sardonically over the fence at the luxuriant meadows of his neighbor, access to which this fence denied his cattle, replied coldly that he couldn't spare the money. Thereupon Kershaw patiently informed him that he would loan him the money, with cattle as security. Hensley replied that he preferred not to be in debt.

"Well, I see you intend to be unscrupulous," Kershaw answered, "so we'll not argue the matter further. However, there is another matter that must be adjusted, whether you have the money or not. I am turning loose on the summer range this year five hundred pure-bred beef-type bulls. Your herd bulls are scrubs, and your cattle and mine roam the public domain together. Hence, you are bound to reap an equal benefit with me from the use of my expensive pure-bred sires. That wouldn't be fair."

"Can't help that," Hensley retorted. "I have no money to buy pure-bred range bulls and compete with you."

"I'll loan you the money, Hensley, and it will be money well invested. And you will not be doing your neighbor a gross injustice."

"Very well," And Robin Kershaw rode away.

In May the Hensley and Kershaw riders drove the cattle of their respective employers up into the summer range in the mountains. But when the Hensley riders returned to the valley the Kershaw riders remained, scoured the range and shot every scrub bull they found wearing "Bar H," the Hensley brand. Also they maintained a patrol all summer and rather effectually succeeded in keeping the Hensley cattle on a sequestered portion of the range. The result was that the Bar H had a 10 per cent calf crop that year while the Circle K (the Kershaw outfit) had 80 per cent.

Joel Hensley was torn between a desire to kill Kershaw or permit him to live, in order that he might borrow from him sufficient money to purchase pure-bred beef-type bulls. Finally he decided on the latter course.

Robin Kershaw saw him coming, so he buckled on a six-shooter and went to meet him. "Well?" he demanded coldly.

"Guess I'll have to buy them pure-bred range bulls, neighbor," Joel

"Lorry, I Sort o' Figger We'd Ought to Call That Country Yonder Forlorn Valley."

Hensley forced a sheepish grin. "If you're still of a mind to let me have the money--"

"The situation has changed a mite since I made you that fair offer, Hensley," Kershaw's voice was very cold. "Your scrub bulls don't worry me now, so I'm not interested in helping you out. I wanted to be a good neighbor, but you wouldn't have it, so now we're enemies, and if you expect to drag yourself off the Circle K under your own power I reckon you'd better be startin' now."

Without a word Hensley wheeled his horse and departed. He had earned his humiliation and he realized it; yet the realization did not, allay the fury that possessed him. Nor did he consider so seriously thereafter the advisability of killing Kershaw; he knew now that Kershaw was suspicious of him, else why had the latter appeared with a pistol at his hip? Evidently Kershaw would kill eagerly enough if driven to it; that he would back up for no man Hensley felt assured.

And there was Robin Kershaw II to be reckoned with, also. So he realized the danger of clashing with a prideful clan that was still fond of tracing its "kin folk" back a few centuries to a coat-of-arms!

So he nursed his hatred, borrowed money from a distant bank and bought pure-bred beef-type bulls. Indeed, he had to, or get out of the cattle business.

But Robin Kershaw was not yet through with him. Followed three years of subnormal snowfall in the mountains; hence, when the spring freshet came, Eden Valley creek overflowed but a title of the territory that was flooded in years of normal snowfall. But Robin Kershaw had put in a concrete diversion dam at the upper end of his ranch, backed the water up and over the low banks and led it by irrigation ditches all over his meadows. He could have permitted the water from these ditches to run under the line fence between his ranch and Hensley's, thus insuring Hensley the customary hay crop and pasture. But Kershaw turned the water, when he was through with it, back into the channel of Eden Valley creek.

Of course there was nothing Hensley could do about this. Kershaw had the first use of the water and when he turned it back into the channel at the boundary line he was quite within the law.

Kershaw put up his customary tonnage of hay that year and wintered his cattle well. Hensley had but a quarter of the hay he required and wintered his cattle poorly; and thin, undernourished cattle produce poor, undernourished calves and a lessened quantity of them.

Following the second year of subnormal snowfall in the mountains he suffered even greater losses. The third year he could stand it no longer. Again he called on Robin Kershaw. He rode up to the latter's house and before the gate held up his hand, palm outward, in the old Indian sign of peace. Nevertheless, Robin Kershaw came out with a pistol on his hip; on the front veranda Robin II fondled a repeating rifle and watched Hensley as a cat watches a gopher hole.

"Kershaw," Hensley began, "you're ruining me."

"That's a lie. You've ruined yourself."

"I've got to have more water this year," Hensley shrieked. "When you're through with the water I want you to run it under the fence to my ditches. If you don't, by G--d, we'll argue this in the smoke. It's plain dirty of you to run it back into the creek again."

"Well, I suppose I could run it into your ditches," Kershaw mused.

"See that you do," Hensley reminded him, and rode off, little realizing that he had made an error of judgment. He thought he had bluffed Robin Kershaw.

When Kershaw was finished with his irrigation that summer, Hensley connected his lower irrigation ditches with Kershaw's and the water started running merrily down over the Hensley meadows. But almost immediately the flow ceased. Kershaw had opened the water gate on his diversion dam and turned the water back into the channel of the creek at the upper end of his ranch instead of the lower!

Hensley was now in a most unpleasant predicament. In the presence of witnesses (Robin II and two of the Kershaw cowboys) he had threatened, if denied the water, to argue the issue with Robin I in the smoke. "He'll make good," Robin Kershaw I decided. And he and his sons and his riders all rode armed with pistols and rifles.

But again Joel Hensley visited the Circle K. "Kershaw," he called from the front gate, "I'll pay for my share of that fence. With interest," he added.

"I don't need the money," Kershaw taunted him. "And I doubt if you'd maintain your share of the upkeep of that fence. How would you like to sell out to me? That's the best and easiest way to shed your water troubles. I'll meet you in a liberal spirit for the sake of peace. Eden Valley," he added, "ain't big enough for us both."

Two weeks later, as he rode in alone from the nearest settlement, Joel Hensley rode out on Kershaw from a clump of pines. Neither man hesitated; it did not occur to either to ask questions; simultaneously they drew and fired.

Mark, now the perversity of Fate. Had each killed the other the feud which, for the next forty years, was to make of Eden Valley a dark and bloody ground, would have ended then. But Joel Hensley's first cartridge had a defective primer--and Robin Kershaw's did not. Whereupon, a coroner's jury at Gold Run, the county seat, returned a verdict of justifiable homicide and restored Robin Kershaw to the bosom of his family. But Joel Hensley left a son--several.

Science at Last Has Overcome Bar to Progress of Skin Transplanting

Surgeons for years have been able to transplant skin from one part of a person's body to another, says the Literary Digest, but tissue transplanted from one person to another almost invariably dies within a few weeks, probably because of slight differences in the composition of the blood, which hinder the transplanted cells in establishing themselves at the new site.

A method by which this difficulty may be met was announced recently by Dr. Harvey B. Stone, associate professor of surgery at Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, Baltimore. In collaboration with Dr. J. C. Owings and George O. Gey, Doctor Stone has been able successfully to transplant thyroid and parathyroid gland tissue from one person to another by growing it for a time outside the body in a culture medium made from the blood serum of the prospective recipient.

In this way, he explained, the tissue becomes adapted to its future sons in fact--and these inherited the casus belli.

CHAPTER III

No relatives, outside the immediate descendants of the Kershaw and Hensley clans, ever participated in the feud started by that defective primer, for it was a point of honor with both clans to "kill their own snakes." During three generations eleven Kershaws and four hired gunmen died with their boots on and two went to state's prison for varying terms. Of the Hensleys thirteen were killed, with five gunmen.

Neither side ever complained to the authorities; as they often said they preferred the good old six-volume law! Only very inquisitive sheriffs invaded Eden Valley seeking redress for the outraged law; and of the half-dozen who did, two, who knew too much, never returned.

At that, the feud surely must have died of inanition at times when the count on each side was even, but for the perennial casus belli of water. Years of lean snowfall in the mountains were years of lean profit for the Hensleys. Despite this disadvantage, the Hensleys prospered in the cattle business to the point where, in the year 1900, they were enabled to put in a diversion dam of their own in Eden Valley creek.

In 1917 there remained of the clan Kershaw its chief, Ranceford Kershaw, a widower of fifty, permanently crippled by reason of a soft-nosed bullet through his hip; his son, Owen, aged twenty, and a daughter, Lorraine, aged sixteen. Of the clan Hensley there remained three women, Angie Tichenor, a widow, and Hattie and Beulah Hensley, both old maids.

It was assumed, locally, that in the fullness of time Nathan Tichenor and Owen Kershaw would shoot it out together; hence, with one or both of the young men out of the way there should be peace, at last, in Eden Valley.

But the World war intervened. Neither Owen Kershaw nor Nathan Tichenor waited to be drafted.

War with Germany, it will be remembered, was declared on April 6, 1917. In March a furious freshet had washed out the Hensley diversion dam in Eden Valley creek. On the morning of April 7 Nathan Tichenor rode up to the gate in the white paling fence before the old log ranch-house of the clan Kershaw, and, like his fire-eating grandfather, help up his hand, palm outward, in the old frontier sign of peace. From the veranda crippled Rance Kershaw glared down at him.

"Our diversion dam went out last month," said young Nate.

"Pleased to hear it, young man. Well?"

"I'm going down to San Francisco tomorrow to enlist--"

"That's to your credit, if I do say so." Old Rance appeared to thaw perceptibly. "Still, you're a mite slow down' your duty. My boy, Owen, left this morning."

"I wish him luck, Mr. Kershaw. What I came for was to ask you if you'd consider favorably the suggestion that one war at a time is enough for our people to be engaged in. Our dam's out, and I ask you, as a favor, to let us have the water after it's done its work for you."

"Why should you ask me a favor? And why should I grant it, young man?"

"Because my mother and my aunts have got to run our outfit while I'm in the army. I didn't figure you'd make war on women."

"How about the old fence bill, young man?"

Young Nate laid a check on the gate post. "My grandfather should have paid that, Mr. Kershaw. It was right low and ornery of him not to. There's a check for it, with interest for forty years at 6 per cent added."

Hernia Is Very Common

THE fact that more men than women are afflicted with hernia, or rupture as it is commonly called, is sometimes blamed on sport or the more active life of men.

However, reliable figures show that while about four times as many men as women undergo operation for hernia, nevertheless hernia is found about six times as often in infant boys as in infant girls.

This then proves that while the condition may be brought about by sport or heavy lifting, in a great majority of cases it is a weakness in the abdominal wall itself that predisposes or gives the tendency to hernia.

And it is this point that should be remembered when operation is being considered. There is no question but that operation is the ideal method of correcting the condition; that is the radical operation which is now often done under a local anaesthetic.

Another operation coming into some favor now is what is called the injection method whereby scar tissue is formed which seems sufficient in some cases to strengthen the abdominal wall enough to prevent the hernia. However, this method has not yet met the general approval of surgeons.

If the operation is performed does this guarantee that the hernia will not occur again?

Unfortunately the hernia does occur after operation, not because the operation was not done properly, but because of the natural weakness or tendency of the abdominal wall to sag or rupture.

There is no question but that a properly fitting truss is a great boon to the wearer and affords a good measure of safety, but in those cases where an operation has a reasonable chance of success (and most cases have a reasonable chance) it would seem only like good sense to be free of the truss and be able to do the things other individuals can do.

Even in those cases born with weak abdominal walls, about 50 per cent of the cases who undergo operation have no return of the hernia.

Your best plan if you have a hernia is to undergo an examination by your family doctor and a surgeon, as your age, your occupation, the condition of your abdominal walls must all be taken into consideration.

If operation is not considered advisable a well fitted truss and the avoidance of heavy work should prevent further trouble.

Curing Cases of Mental Conflict

WHEN statistics show that at the present rate of increase in mental ailments 50 years from now half the civilized world will be confined to mental institutions with the other half taking care of them, we must all give this some thought.

The world has gone through a lot of trouble in the past 20 years and mental illness must be expected, but the very large number afflicted has brought so much attention to the matter that new methods of treatment are being tried, and will continue to have, a most helpful influence in curing many cases.

In the first place children that are a little "different" are being treated and will become men and women able and willing to take their normal or natural place in the world. This means prevention of mental ailments.

And even in adults many cases now confined to mental institutions are being cured by painstaking treatment. After all physical defects--teeth, tonsils, eyes, ears and other parts--are corrected, careful questioning of the patient is undertaken.

Dr. W. H. Cassels, of Provincial Mental hospital, Ponoka, Alberta, states that many cases are due to some "conflict" in the patient's mind. He puts these conflicts into three classes: (1) the actual condition existing when the patient has done something wrong, or which conflicts with what he thinks is right; (2) where the patient desires something different from his present condition although the condition might seem normal or satisfactory to most people; (3) where the patient's standards of living are so strict that he is in conflict with them because it is almost impossible to live up to them. This is called the "rigid" type of personality.

What are the methods by which many of these cases are cured?

In the first case the patient is shown that he is only human, and that to err is human; that mistakes are forgivable.

In the second case where desire for a different condition exists his unsatisfied desire is directed into other channels. For instance a bereaved mother may give vent to her feelings by charitable work.

In the third case the patient is shown that his standards are too strict for the world in general and that he'll have to give and take to a greater extent in order to get along with his fellow men.

Captain Fried, hero of many ocean rescues, reaches New York but once a month on an average. The other day a friend asked him how he got from the ship to his home in Tuckahoe.

"By machine," he answered.

"How long does it take?"

"Less than an hour."

"You must have a good chauffeur," the friend said.

"Yes," said Fried, "but she won't let me drive!"--Philadelphia Bulletin.

Overstudy

"A man must be a student all his days to hold a position like yours," remarked the admiring constituent.

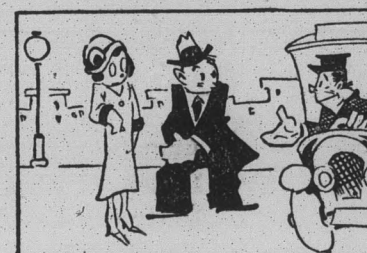

"That is true," answered Senator Sorghum, "and, like a student, I get so weary of hard lessons that I am going in for more recreation. I am going to organize a movement to include a sports page in the Congressional Record."

Co-Operation in Household Tasks

Planned Division of Work Would Seem to Have Good Points.

In every family where there are two or more women who share in the work of homemaking there can be a certain amount of community and co-operative housekeeping. Much has been said and written about the advantages of minimized labor in community housekeeping, but repeated experiments have proved the disadvantages of comparatively large groups of unrelated persons attempting to keep it up. Uncongeniality of temperaments was largely at fault. But what fails with unrelated groups can be carried on successfully within the limits of a home, with persons who are all working for the good of their own establishment. It is important to have a well-established basis of co-operation.

Let us imagine a home in which there are two, three or more women adults. They may be sisters, or mother and daughters. Each person has some special ability, no preference for some part of the work. One woman may find pleasure in cooking, another in keeping rooms in order and spic-and-span. One may delight in going to market and seeing and picking out the attractive foods and the needed edibles. One may find making beds and doing the upstairs work not at all irksome, while another may dislike it decidedly. One may find the laundry work a part suited to her preference, while others may find it tiresome and uncongenial. There are some women who like to wash, while others like to iron. Perhaps it may be so in the households in question. If so, here is a good division of the laundry work.

In the cooking line there are various preferences. For instance, some women are natural cake makers. The cakes they make have a quality and texture which others fail to acquire without much painstaking. Other women are excellent vegetable cooks; others cook meat to perfection. The women who do these things well usually like to do the work. It is a mistake for one woman of the household to assume all the culinary work. Co-operative cookery is much easier on everyone.

A home is, in reality, a small community. There are various departments. The competent homemaker learns to run them all well. But when there are other women in the family, each should take some department, some special part of the work which is well-liked, and assume the responsibility of it. This is a great relief to the homemaker. The division of labor permits each person to have a share of leisure. Without such division, one woman overworks, and the rest have the leisure, which is apt to mean leisure to criticize. Divided activity makes each respect the other's part, for work respects work. The co-operative housekeeping suggested has been proved a good idea.

POPULAR DIVERSIONS

What do most folks do with their leisure hours? Of course individuals have their own pet pastimes and diversions, but a recent survey by the National Recreation association of New York shows that people are going in more for home-centered recreations.

Favorite diversions among 5,000 persons in 29 cities were found to be, in order of preference: reading newspapers and magazines, listening to the radio, going to the movies, visiting or entertaining, reading novels, motoring, swimming, letter writing, etc.

The Sar

The Norwegian expedition of 1910 proved definitely that the Sargasso sea does not contain a mass of marine plants so dense and thick that sailing ships venturing therein are held indefinitely without the power to free themselves. The position of the Sargasso sea varies with the wind and currents, but is approximately 20 to 25 degrees north and 30 to 70 degrees west. There is no record of any other places where derelict vessels might be detained, though there are areas in the Pacific, Indian and Antarctic similar to the Sargasso sea in the Atlantic.

First Greyhound Race

The museum at the Guildhall, London, contains a cup which proves that even eighteen hundred years ago the Londoner was fond of greyhounds. The border at the top is made of a circle of them chasing each other around the rim. Its unusual shape suggests that it was given as a prize probably for some sort of greyhound race. So it is possible that greyhound racing took place in London about 100 A. D., when the cup was made.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Lighting the U. S. Capitol

Experiments in electric lighting in Washington began at the Capitol on November 20, 1878. The Forty-sixth congress appropriated $2,400 to light the building with electricity. After many tests, lamps were installed October 4, 1879. Edison electric lights were inaugurated at Fifteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue on October 15, 1881. F street between Ninth and Fifteenth was lighted by electricity in 1882. It is true that the Capital was slow in installing electric street lights.

The News does Job Printing

John McAlpine received a telegram Thursday morning informing him of the death of his mother at Streator, Illinois. Deceased was 80 years of age and had lived at Streator for fifty years. Friends of Mr. McAlpine extend their sympathy to the family in their sorrow.

Members of Point Loma Masonic lodge and members of Point Loma Star chapter O.E.S. as well as their families are invited to enjoy a picnic at H. K. Rankin's cabin at Descanso next Sunday, June 3rd. Directions from Mr. Rankin says his place is one-half mile beyond Descanso post office. Ask Jack White at Descanso store. The lodge will provide meat, bread, coffee, etc. Members will bring a covered dish, also cups and silver. Turn left at Descanso Junction and go 1 1/2 miles, watch for signs on the highway.

Hardly a week goes by without loss of property, cash or jewelry being reported to local police, taken from autos left locked near the beach. Little of this thievery is at Ocean Beach but several instances have recently been reported at the Mission Beach amusement center. Don't leave valuables or scarcely anything in your auto, even when you lock it, for the thieves are bold, and will break a door glass or window if they see anything inside they want, just adding additional cost to the property owner. Leave your valuables with a friend or keep a close watch on them.

Wednesday morning Ruth Whitaker of 5063 Santa Monica avenue was saved from drowning in the old Pacific by heroic action of local boys. She went swimming about 7:30 a. m. and suffered a heart attack it is said, then was caught in a rip-tide and taken out beyond the breakers without strength to return. As reported to the News, she was seen in distress by people on the beach and two local men stripped down to shorts and without hesitation went to her assistance, others going for life guards who were not yet on duty. Spade, Burns and brother, life guards, in a few minutes had the life boat out and brought in all three people.

"Oh let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end; but establish the just: for the righteous God trieth the hearts and reins." These words of the Psalmist are the Golden Text in the Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. The Lesson-Sermon denounces ancient and modern necromancy, alchemy, mesmerism and hypnotism. One of the Scriptural selections in the Lesson-Sermon includes the verses from Leviticus: "And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Speak unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, and say unto them, Ye shall be holy: for I the Lord your God am holy. . . . And ye shall not swear by my name falsely, neither shall thou profane the name of thy God: I am the Lord. . . . Regard not them that have familiar spirits, neither seek after wizards, to be defiled by them: I am the Lord your God." Among the passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, are these words: "Divine Mind rightly demands man's entire obedience, affection, and strength. No reservation is made for any lesser loyalty. Obedience to Truth gives man power and strength. Submission to error superinduces loss of power."

AMERICANA

BY
ELLSWORTH F. WHALEN

Within the next few years, we shall probably see new streamlined trains capable of over 100 miles per hour speed running on popular schedules in every one of these United States. Streamlining all vehicles whether of land, sea or air use, adds speed and the much desired efficiency of operation. The art of streamlining, first applied to aircraft then to automobiles and finally the railroad car, marks another chapter in the progress of man to conquer nature's forces which tend to slow up an impatient world full of people in a rush to get someplace for no definite reason whatsoever. Americans are always in a hurry to get somewhere evidently so they can bring a nervous breakdown upon themselves and help the medical profession make a decent living. If we devoted the attention to proper upkeep of our bodies that we usually devote to acquiring paper called money, thousands of doctors might take up the profession of ditch-digging instead of the prominent pastime of appendix-digging.

Common citizens, like you and me, are always being warned about the certain possibilities of a nation thousands of miles away arming itself to blast us all off the earth. What other nations think about war providing they live within their treaty rights is their business and not our Country's. Clubs and organizations throughout the United States distribute literature on maintaining peace from a sole militaristic point of view. These organizations would have the youth of America believe that to die in war is honorable, that they are fighting to save democracy, and everybody is sacrificing their personal fortune to help them achieve victory—victory over what?

The most unique and perhaps the most effective method of preventing war, is eliminate its advocates from physical life or in plainer words, kill them. When we have abolished the financial profits of war, we will have abolished war itself. The time has come for you and I to write our Congressmen urging the formation of a bill to take over the manufacture of munitions by our Government from private industry and selfish individuals.

How long before we enjoy television? Television radio sets are in demand and all America is ready to pay for it. We want television and we want it now, but the large radio corporations say no. Surely there must be some way of placing this great invention before the public for the utilization of mankind's happiness. Reports appearing in the daily papers last year announced that television had been perfected to a large degree and all America would enjoy its benefits within three months. The three months passed—and what did we enjoy in the way of television? Your mental answer and mine are the same. When private industry hogs a great invention for the enjoyment of the human race, it is time for the Government to become a little socialistic and force its manufacture or seize the patent and turn it over for the use of all radio manufacturers.

Only a very small percentage of people budget out their life. The writer would like to do it but since he can't keep New Year resolutions, he couldn't live up to his budget of life. A life budget would probably include so many hours of sleep per night, so much of certain types of food per day, a definite amount of daily exercise and numerous other requirements. If one made out a good healthy budget and kept it faithfully, he might lead a long and ideal life. But you take the lazy type of American like me who takes life as it comes and doesn't particularly care how long life holds out or how and what you got? You have the picture of an average American. And as I pointed out before, all we are concerned about is rushing here and there and wishing the old car could do 80 miles per hour instead of only 60. Remember when kiddies used to say, "going like sixty?" Now they are talking in hundreds of miles per hour.

LEAVE NO VALUABLES IN PARKED AUTOS

Local police have asked us to warn bathers and picnickers at the beach, that they should leave no valuables in their autos. Even if cars are locked and thieves wish to enter they just break the glass and take what is worth while.
